I have a total of four labels which are split up as follows: Label one Label two Label three Label four When a button is clicked I want to have the labels three and four joined together as a new label, so that it reads: Label 3 & 4 How would I go about doing this? A: You need to define a class of MyLabel which contains a label. You can add your dynamic labels to an array, and then set the text of the last label in the array to the text of the first label in the array. For example (in Swift 3): var labelArray = [MyLabel, MyLabel, MyLabel, MyLabel] @IBAction func buttonPressed(_ sender: UIButton) { if labelArray.count > 1 { labelArray.last?.text = labelArray[0].text labelArray.removeLast() } } You will need to define a class called MyLabel: class MyLabel { var text: String? init(text: String?) { self.text = text } } It is possible to simplify this a little by using Swift's array extension: extension Array where Element == Any { mutating func removeLast() { self.removeLast() if let last = self.first { last.text = self.first } } } With this modification, labelArray looks like this: var labelArray = ["0"] + [MyLabel(text: "one")!, MyLabel(text: "two")!, MyLabel(text: "three")]
